Indonesian police have killed the suspected leader of Islamic State's Southeast Asian network after a shootout in a Malaysian capital suburb. In a statement late on Wednesday, Indonesian police said Bahrin Naim, a Malaysian national, was killed in the shootout in Puchong, near Kuala Lumpur, and that police have found the body of his Malaysian wife, who was reportedly also arrested. Naim was known to have led an Indonesian terror group, Jamaah Ansharut Daulah, or JAD, which operates in Southeast Asia. The Islamic State affiliate, also known as ISIS-Jemaah Ansharut Daulah, or ISIS-JAD, was formed in 2014 after Naim was expelled from al-Qaeda's Southeast Asian cell, al-Qaeda in the Indian Subcontinent. A Malaysian police source confirmed to Reuters that Naim's wife, Nadhiah Binti Haji Mohd Salleh, was also detained. Hazrat Ammar, the head of Malaysian police's anti-terrorism division, told reporters that Naim and his wife had been detained on suspicion of using the internet to provide funds for ISIS-JAD. The arrest came after a raid at a house in Bukit Bintang district in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia's capital, and the police said they found bomb-making material in the raid.
