Chinese Taipei - Wikipedia In human history, the Dacunlong site is the oldest culture site, dating back to pre-historic times. Although there is no reliable information that The site is built upon the foundation of an ancient man made lake which was a refuge for animals, especially water buffalo and horses. That on which the Dacunlong site is built To reach the lake, one must travel through a gateway which connects the lake to a stone passageway. After a few hours walking through this passageway, one finally reaches a clearing where a watchtower is located. In this clearing, one will find the remains of large hearths. Numerous artifacts of the Bronze Age have been found in the vicinity, some of which are still on display at the museum in Dacunlong. Among the bronze artifacts are tools, ornaments, and ornaments made from animal horns. These artifacts have now been restored and placed in the museum. Among the stones found at the site are some which are inscribed with cuneiform writing. These have been used as markers at archaeological excavations. The material culture of the Dacunlong site is considered to be representative of the early Bronze Age. The site is also rich in historical and cultural heritage. The location of the city is also similar to the location of the ancient capital of the Chu kingdom, a position which it holds even today. The culture of the Dacunlong site is a product of the Chu kingdom. The Dacunlong site is the oldest and largest of the Chu sites. It is only at Dacunlong that one can see the Chu pottery, the bronzeware of Chu, the Chu sword and the Chu stone axes.
