I have got a WPF application that is essentially a form for entering data into a database. So far it works, but I don't know what to do with the data. I am fairly new to WPF so I have been working through tutorials and also the help section of VS. I have figured out the datagrid is blank because it's not loading. I can't seem to figure out what the problem is though. When I run the project from VS I get no errors and the main window opens but the datagrid isn't loaded. Is it possible that the designer doesn't load until the Window's constructor is called? //FormData public partial class MainWindow : Window { public FormData(FormCollection formCollection) {
