, but one of the biggest hurdles is the reliance of bus fares across Scotland. There is a restricted range of buses that travel to schools, and as a result, the school day ends quickly and families are faced with the decision as to whether they can wait out the bus journey or risk missing the last bus home. Another possibility is investing in the southside depot, where employers can bring buses in from south Edinburgh and park them out of the way on nearby Dumgill Drive. "We're clear, if you want to make investment in the schools, we're not opposition," says Maud. "We support the schools to get the buses they need, to get the benefits that buses bring them, but the buses need to have better, and more links on the routes." In 2005, the Edinburgh Transport Committee announced funding of £10.4 million per year to meet the capital cost of building new schools – an amount that had risen from £5.8 million in 1995. However, the capital funding was just for schools under construction and once they were finished, the annual maintenance budgets would have to be met by grant funding. Unlike student transport, where the maintenance is provided by the local education authority, maintenance is decided on a case-by-case basis. "What happened was, the maintenance of those schools was not adequately funded. There was no rhyme or reason to which schools were being upgraded and enhanced," says Maud. Having a comprehensive, integrated transport system, giving all children the same right to access the greatest education possible, is the only answer." Other proposals include a £250 million investment to enable all schools to meet the government's new sustainable transport plan by 2020, in order to overcome bottlenecks in links between schools. It also includes a new vehicle to replace the ageing 74 buses serving the school system, and new delivery software to provide more streamlined and effective bus journeys. The system is not without its fair share of detractors, however, with the transport committee's chair, Councillor Gordon Matheson, suggesting that free school transport across Scotland could hit road use more than it improves the education. "Just because you give buses to parents doesn't mean that people are not going to go to work and drive their cars. These are not the messages that we want to send.◆

I hope you are enjoying the summer. The new school year is approaching and many parents are getting their kids ready for school. Whether you're working with your kids or are volunteering, you will want to create a "graduation" montage to commemorate the ending of their school year. In this montage, I have selected a number of clipart images that can be used as decoration or to add color to a school graduation photo montage. Some of these clipart images include some of the important achievements or memorabilia that your child collected throughout the year. Graduation Clipart You'll need Adobe Photoshop Elements, which can be downloaded from the Adobe website. I have used the Teal Graduation clipart as an example, but you can do the same with the other clipart images below. Please note that all pictures, unless otherwise noted, can be purchased directly from the Adobe Clip Art Store. Steps 1. Open a new image, 1800 by 1400 pixels in size. 2. Select the Rectangular Marquee Tool and click inside the image. 3. Click the rectangle you have created to the right of the top left corner of the frame. 4. Click the "Clone" button at the bottom of the tool bar. 5. Repeat steps 3 – 4 on the rectangle below the first. 6. Click on the "Close" button. Steps 1. Open a new image, 1280 by 1024 pixels in size. 2. Select the Rectangular Marquee Tool and click inside the image. 3. Click on the rectangle you have created. 4. Click on the "Clone" button at the bottom of the tool bar. 5. Click on the "File" menu and select "New" then "Pattern." 6. Select "Standard." 7. Click on the "File" menu and select "Open." 8. Navigate to the folder where you have the template you want to use as a pattern. Open your new file. 9. Click "OK" on the dialog box. 10. You will be asked to resize your file to match the size of the template. Click "OK" on the dialog box and continue to use the sizing guides on
