The fatal fire at the West Oakland factory where rap superstar and producer Too Short died Friday has raised questions about how numerous flammable chemicals are stored on site. Whether chemical or flammable substances are stored at the factory is an open question. The site has a history of fires. Over the past decade, the building has been the site of at least five fires. In at least one, federal investigators determined, hazardous chemicals had fueled the fire. Police say the fire was intentionally set. Witnesses say they saw Too Short collapse and die on the floor with flames burning his clothes and other belongings. The building is located near Yolo Street in West Oakland. Close friend Mac Dre says he first met Too Short in the early 1990s. They went to high school together. "He was a legend," Mac Dre says. "We didn't see him everyday but for some reason we always sat together. He was always a cool guy to sit around with. He was just a cool dude. We used to like rap and always talk about the next song, the next record. We had a lot of friends in common. When he was doing (his solo album) 'I got my own Step' he was showing that record to everybody and everybody wanted to come and listen to it and hear what he was gonna say about his life." Mac Dre says Too Short was also a fixture at the Findlay Street Cafe, a West Oakland club popular with hip-hop artists and known for being the birthplace of Too Short's career. The Findlay Street Cafe closed last year, and Mac Dre says Too Short was a regular. "I think that they're trying to say that Facile synthesis and biological evaluation of new thiazol-2-ones as PI3K δ inhibitors. Aim: PI3K δ inhibitors are of interest for the treatment of multiple diseases. The aim of this study was to synthesize a series of thiazol-2-ones with improved in vitro antiproliferative activity and determine their inhibitory effects on PI3K δ and its kinase activity. Materials & Methods: Newly synthesized thiazol-2-ones were evaluated for their antiproliferative activity against six human tumor cell lines. Pharmacokinetics data of selected compounds was also obtained. Results: Thiazol-2-ones showed significantly increased antiproliferative activity compared with the starting point and their selectivity was strongly dependent on the individual thiazol-2-ones. All thiazol-2-ones significantly inhibited p110 δ with an IC50 in the nanomolar range. Overall, the highest potency against p110 δ was found for the thiazol-2-ones 3 and 4. Conclusion: These novel thiazol-2-ones are a valuable scaffold for the development of potent, specific PI3K δ inhibitors. was great, I'm terrible." "How is that even possible?" "Come on, sir."
